

Discovered in 1899

Discovered by
Andrew Debierne

α

Actinium is a very powerful source of alpha rays, but is rarely used outside research

The name is derived from the Greek 'actinos', meaning a ray

Actinium

Ac

89

Actinium glows blue in the dark. This blue color comes from the ionization of gases in the air by radioactivity.